

Subject: Re: WordPerfect Macro Collection

From: Joshua Brown <joshbrown@northstate.net>

Date: 3/6/2025, 3:09 AM

To: Tim Garner <tgarnerca@yahoo.com>

Sure, go ahead and pass them along. By today's standards, most of the macros I wrote have been superseded, but if anyone can still use them that's great.

- Josh Brown

On 3/5/2025 7:08 PM, Tim Garner wrote:

Hello Mr. Brown,

Here's a blast from the past! I came across your 1990 WordPerfect 5.1 macro collection today. I am compiling as many collections and individual macros as I can in order to pass them along to Prof. Edward Mendelson of Columbia University, who maintains a free website about WordPerfect for DOS. You might be surprised to learn that there is still, after all these years, a thriving WPDOS community.

I am writing to ask you if you would consider donating your collection for posting and sharing on the good prof's site. None of the programs, guides, macros, etc., are monetized in any way. They are strictly a community resource.

Thanks in advance for your consideration,
Tim Garner
San Diego, CA

P.S. If you are curious, here's the link to the page on Prof. M.'s site that discusses third-party tools: <https://mendelson.org/wpdos/tools.html#macros>. Once there, go to the heading "Macro collections, manuals and tools" to see links to the materials I've compiled to date.